Driven Guineafowl in the Molopo Bushveld

A Fast and Unforgettable Shooting Experience

Set in the remote Molopo Bushveld of South Africa's North-West Province, this exceptional shooting experience takes place in a naturally rich environment where vast agricultural lands meet dense, untouched bushveld. A perfect combination of food supply and habitat allows wild Guineafowl populations to flourish in remarkable numbers.

Driven Guineafowl shooting here is widely considered one of the most exciting forms of bird shooting in Africa. Inspired by traditional British driven shooting—but far more dynamic—large troops are driven over a line of 6 to 8 guns positioned at carefully selected pegs.

With the support of teams of beaters and flag bearers working in perfect coordination, flocks often numbering in the thousands are pushed from feeding grounds into the bushveld, creating fast, instinctive shooting that challenges even experienced guns. Swainson's and Natal Spurfowl frequently add further variety and difficulty.

A typical day begins with breakfast at first light, followed by three to four morning drives. After a relaxed field lunch under the shade of camel thorn acacias, the afternoon continues with further drives before concluding with classic African sundowners.

This is a truly wild shoot—no released birds, only carefully managed natural populations. Expect volume, intensity, and a style of shooting that is as authentic as it is unforgettable.

Mosita Lodge

Authentic Bushveld Living with Refined Comfort

Mosita Lodge offers a warm and authentic retreat in the heart of the African bushveld—an ideal complement to the intensity of the shooting day.

Set beneath camel thorn acacia trees, the lodge features traditional thatched and stone chalets, thoughtfully arranged to provide both comfort and privacy. Each of the eight twin chalets includes en-suite bathrooms, flexible bedding options, and climate control to ensure a relaxed stay throughout the season.

The lodge centers around a welcoming dining and lounge area, where guests come together to enjoy excellent food and easy conversation. Evenings begin with sundowners at the open Lapa, where a crackling fire and the colours of the African sunset create a truly special atmosphere.

Dining is a highlight, combining generous, traditional African cuisine with a refined European touch, complemented by carefully selected South African wines. Meals can be enjoyed indoors or outside under the stars around the fire pit.

Mosita Lodge is not about excess, but about genuine hospitality, comfort, and a strong sense of place. It is a setting that allows guests to unwind, connect, and fully experience the spirit of the African bush.
